Definition of Nature Photography

Nature images include living mammals, birds, reptiles, insects, plants, geological features and natural phenomena such as hurricanes and tidal waves. Human elements shall not be present, except where those human elements are integral parts of the nature story such as when photographing barn owls. Domesticated animals and cultivated plants are ineligible. Story telling is an important element of nature photography. Scientific bands on wild animals are permissible. Acceptable environments include aquariums, zoos, game farms or other areas in which animals are enclosed or confined. Images of plants in botanical gardens are permitted provided they are not hybrid plants or plants that have been cultivated. Techniques that enhance the presentation of the photograph without changing the nature story or the pictorial content are allowed including flash, cropping, HDR, focus stacking, dodging and burning. Any technique that removes, moves, adds or replaces pictorial elements in an image are not permitted such as cloning, filling, patching or blending of images with different content. Monochrome images are allowed but not toned or infrared images. The photographer must have taken the original image.
